

Marine Social Science Network Newsletter August 2020

Welcome to August's MarSocSci Newsletter!

Another busy month for #TeamMarSocSci, and this month's newsletter is, once again, full of information about new publications, #marsocsci job and research opportunities, links to webinars from MarSocSci HQ *and* our wonderful MarSocSci Australia Chapter, info on August's #MarSocSciBookClub read and chat..and SO much more! Here at MarSocSci HQ, we are keen to involve you all as much as we can, so our Comms Team have launched a MarSocSci Photo of the Month feature - check it out!

As ever, we encourage you to use the platforms created by #TeamMarSocSci to promote your projects, publications and calls for collaboration. If you want to contribute to the next newsletter, have anything you would like us to promote, or if you have any suggestions as to how we can further support the MarSocSci community, contact us on comms@marsocsci.net or through @MarSocSci on Twitter and Instagram.

We have expanded our social media reach - you can now also find us on Instagram (@MarSocSci). We'd love to see your photos of your field work, and your depictions of people and the sea (or coast!). We will be choosing one photo each month to promote across the MarSocSci community. Send us in your photos on the theme of 'people and the sea' to comms@marsocsci.net to be featured! Please include the photo, a brief blurb of where it was taken or how it relates to your #marsocsci research, and the credit you would like us to use!

MarSocSci's Webinar Series

MarSocSci Webinar - Monday 24th August - 13:00 BST

Our second MarSocSci speaker will be Dr Patrick Heidkamp who will make an argument for the value of a transdisciplinary action research approach in assuring a just and sustainable future for our coastal zones. Through a review of Project Blue @ Southern Connecticut State University which focuses on engaging the Long Island Sound Blue Economy and with a focus on one specific example—the burgeoning Long Island Sound seaweed industry—the talk and subsequent discussion hopes to outline some of the challenges and opportunities in developing such an action research program.

Register for the webinar here

If you can't make the webinar, don't fear! We will be recording all of our webinars and making them available on the MarSocSci YouTube Channel. If you missed our first webinar on the recent UK Marine Pioneer project given by Sarah Young and Chrissie Ingle, you can watch the session here.

If you would like to put forward a topic for a future webinar, send us an email at info@marsocsci.net

Update from the MarSocSci Book Club!

Each month, we will choose a different book, and schedule a Zoom chat to discuss it.

We'd love you to join in—and to come along to the chat—feel free to bring a cuppa or we'd love you to join in, and to come along to the chat - feel free to bring a cuppa or a vino! We will also alternate the times of the chats each month so that as many people as possible can take part.

This month we have selected The Outrun by Amy Liptrot

August's #MarSocSciBookClub chat is scheduled for 25 August 2020 at 1700 BST.

To join the chat, email info@marsocsci.net beforehand to be sent the joining details and access code.

If you're not able to make this due to your timezone, please drop us an email at info@marsocsci.net to let us know where you are and we'll try to move the time for next month to accommodate more people.

ONLINE SEMINAR SERIES

Missed last month's #MarSocSciAus webinar? No problem! You can catch up via our YouTube channel here. Carla Sbrocchi presented on the topic of 'Emerging ideas for integrating concepts of legitimacy with fisheries management'. Read more from Carla below to find out what to expect from the webinar:

'The value of social science to fisheries management is increasingly evident and acknowledged, but fisheries managers struggle with making the research operational. How can we translate findings from our social science research into strategic and operational objectives and incorporate them into decision support or planning mechanisms, like harvest strategies? This presentation explores the concept of legitimacy in operational fisheries management, drawing on specific examples from my PhD research.

I first provide an overview of legitimacy issues in fisheries management and present a framework that considers the impacts of legitimacy on the costs of managing the fishery. I will also outline some key findings from my study of the southern king crab fishery in Chile, which addresses how different techniques for eliciting management preferences can dramatically affect how researchers interpret respondents' preferences. Knowing the reasons for management preferences provides critical context that can help managers articulate social objectives for the fishery, target management strategies, and prevent unintended consequences by understanding where legitimacy costs are likely to occur. Together, these are important considerations for the development of harvest strategies into the future.'

Welcoming our newest MarSocSci Network Chapter - MARSSI is the all-island Marine Social Sciences Network Ireland

We welcome researchers, policy-makers and practitioners in the marine and coastal sector. If you are based on the island of Ireland and would like to make connections with people like you who are driving the field of marine social science on the island of Ireland, we would love to hear from you. MARSSI is a network for those just starting out to those at the top of their careers and we want to create a national community, supporting articulation and communication of the complex and complicated relationship between society and the sea. To find out more, contact Ruth Brennan (Republic of Ireland co-lead) at ruth.brennan@tcd.ie and Heather Ritchie (Northern Ireland co-lead) at h.ritchie@ulster.ac.uk.

Don't forget - if you are arranging a regional or local MarSocSci meet up, let us know so we can promote it across the MarSocSci community and through the newsletter. Let us know by emailing info@marsocsci.net
